DETAILS BY DORSEY

OF THE NINETEEN STAR-ROUTES

Mentioned in the Indictment— Everything Explained, Except Rerdell's False Testimony, and That Circumstantially Denied— The Government Interposes Tech-nical Objections.
When the Star-Route trial was resumed this morning, ex-Senator Dersey continued his evi-dence. He denied that he ever filled up an admixed as to animals and men after it had miliavit as to animals and men after it had been sworn to or authorized it be done, Neither did he authorize the changing of an mildavit after it had been placed on file.

That Bellord Check.

That Helford Check.

Celonel Ingersoil said to the Court that he did not wish to take any advantage, and he wished to know if he could ask the witness whether or not he ever gave a check to J. B. Belford, at any time for any amount whatever. His Honor wished to know if there was any objection.

His Honor wished to know if there was any objection.

Mr. Merrick said that he did not object if the courtesy was returned, and he permitted to examine further.

Colonel Ingersoil changed the question, and the witness denied that he ever told Berdeil that he gave a check to J. B. Heiford. He denied that he ever told Rerdeil to charge up a check to Belford for $2,000 or any other amount. He never had a transaction with Belford for a cent in his life except in relation to the rife, which Colonel Ingersoil had stated to the court and which he would repeat it it was wished. He would like to see that $2,000 check that so much had been said about.

The witness did not take any steps to get Boone out of the partnership and somebody else in. He had not been here for a month before, and was not here when Boone went out and Valie came in.

The letter of Valle to Mr. Dorsey in regard to and valie came in.

The letter of Valle to Mr. Dorsey in regard to the out of Bordell against Valle for salary claimed was read. The witness said that he never saw the letter at all, and never heard of it until these trials commenced.

The Cleastenin Bonds.

The Cleastenin Bonds.

Colonel Ingersoll called attention to the bonds sent to Clendenin for sureties and the note sent with them.

The witness said that he wrote the note, and it was done for the purpose of explaining how the bonds was to be executed. He had no intention of defrauding the Government, and could not see how there was any fraud in it. The witness' attention was called to the route from Pueblo to Rosta. He said that he was acqualated with the route and country and proceeded to give the arrival of trains at Pueblo, time of the junction with other trains and connection with the Rosta stages.

Colonel Ingersoll offered to show that had there not been derelictien of duty or mismanagement by the postmaster at Pueblo, or neglect of the mail railway superintendent to give the proper order, the Rosita mail might have arrived one day earlier than it did. That the Pueblo postmaster instead of delivering the mail to the Rosita stage, sent it on to Canyon City, which made it one day later in reaching Rosita than by the other route.

Mr. Merick objected, and argument ensued.

His Henor could not see the relevancy of the The Clendenin Bonds sued.

His Honor could not see the relevancy of the offer, and sustained the objection.
The witness had been over the route from Trinided to Madison, and knew all about that country. It was a farming and stock-growing country. In 1878, 1879 and 1880 the increase of population and business interests was so great and so rapidly did it grow that the citizens built

A Telegraph and Telephone Line A Telegraph and Telephone Line over the entire route. The witness said that along the line of the animus City and Olo Calinte route it just began to grow in 1879. People went in, mines were opened and numerous mining camps were set up. He thought then that they ought to have a daily mail through that country, and was still of the same opinion. In regard to the country traversed by the route from Silverton to Parrott City, he said there was a great mining boom there in 1879.

After the allotment of routes was made to him in the division he made an effort to have them increased wherever he thought it justifiable.

them increased wherever he thought it justifable.

The witness was present at his office about July 19, 20 or 21, 1881, when Rerdell had a conversation with Boslor about a pencil memorandum that he had before the Attorney-General. When witness went into the office, Bardell and Bosler were talking together. Herdell was telling Bosler wint he had said and done at the Attorney-General's and Postmaster-General's. In the conversation Rerdell spoke of a memorandum that he had and used at the time, which he showed MacVeagh and which he said that he had written in imitation of the witness' handwriting. Bosler asked where the memorandum was. Rerdell said that he tore it up and threw it in the waste-basket. Rerdell then picked the pieces out and put them together. The memorandum was shown to the witness and he thought that it was his own handwriting until Rerdell Told Him That He (Rerdell) Had Written 16.

He asked why he did, and Rerdell told the witness that he had done it to make those people (Attorney-General and Postmaster-General) think that he had other papers and letters and result with the second second the second se crail think that he had other papers and the ters of the witness.

The checks given by the witness to A. E. Boone were shown.

Mr. Dorsey said that Mr. Boone had told the truth as to the circumstances under which these checks were given. They were not for any individual interest of his (Mr. Dorsey), but for Miner, Peck & Co. and J. W. Dorsey & Co. The firm of Miner, Peck & Co. was composed of John R. Miner, John M. Co. was composed of John R. Miner, John M. Land and John W. Dorsey. That of John W. Peck and John W. Dorsey. That of John W. Dorsey & Co. of John W. Dorsey and A. E. Boone.

Joone.

In regard to subcontracts, Mr. Dorsey said has he had no intention of taking any advanage of the Government in filing any subconract or by the incorporation of any clause in a tractor by the incorporation of any clause in a subcontract.

Colonel Ingersoll called attention to a paper with "Senste Chamber" heading, which had been called in question, and the witness said that there was an allowance of $125 a year to each Senator for stationery, and all the paper a Senator got was charged up to him, and he had to pay for it just the same as if he got it from a store. The witness had always paid for the paper used by him. A recess was here taken.

She has recently been refitted and entire new and safe boilers put in. She is of the same tomage as the Arrowsmith, and on the model of the best class of Hudson River steamers. New York, March 29.—Little Thunder and Leading Feather, two leading chiefs of the Chippewa Indian tribes on the Red Lake and White Earth reservations in Northwest Minnesota, have arrived here with the Intention of arousing public sympathy in their behalf, claiming that the whites are destroying their limber, injuring the reservations, robbing them of Government supplies and endangering the crops. They say that five logging camps have been all whiter on the reservation where an Indian is not allowed to cut a tree, and two immediately outside the reservation limits, all destroying the timber so rapidly that the amount of needed raintail is endangered. The tribe, about 1,200 in number, is Christianized, and most of them are engaged in farming. The chiefs are accompanied by Father Ignatius Thomasini, who has been a missionary among them for years, and who corroborates their statements. They claim that members of the Indian ring are strong enough to prevent appeals sent to Washington from ever reaching responsible officers.

The Dead Capitol.

A CRITIC embassador visited the Capitol to-day and found nothing of interest. Few to-day and found nothing of interest. Few visitors find their way there nowadays, and everything is quiet, very quiet. The postoffice of the House and Senate are open, of course, but they are infrequently visited, Representative Bliss (N. Y.) being the only one who gets his mail from the House postoffice. A few Members and Senators are receiving their mail by carriers in the city. The re-arrangement of seats in the House has not begun yet. The document, folding and other rooms are open, but they are not visited often. The Congressional and law libraries are deserted, save by the employes. The halls are tread by few feet. The higher officers of either side of the Capitol are mostly away. Ex-Speaker Keifer was at his room to-day.

It is said by those who claim to know that the President will designate Hon. Frank Hatton, First Assistant Postmaster-General, to be the acting Postmaster-General, which appointment will hold good for ten days, at the end of which a Postmaster-General will, under the law, have to be ap-negated. THE following newly-appointed collectors of internal revenue will be inducted into office on April 1: James S. Smart, 15th New York district; George W. Post, Nebraska; John B. THE Department of Justice has decided, owing to the strictures passed upon the President on account of certain pardons reently made—notably those of Murphy and O'Leary, the Washington three-card monte men—to heareafter keep secret all pardons. The infamy of this rule is apparent to the most casual observer. The pardoning power is to be made one for private inter-

The Treasury Department has decided that the rate of duty, as between the old and new tariff, to take effect July I next, is to be decided by the date of arrival of the importing vessel at the exterior port of entry, and that the goods arriving at such port before July I, and arriving at a western port after that date, under the Immediate Transportation act, will be dutiable under the present tariff, unless they reunder the present tariff, unless they re-main in a public store or bonded warehouse on the day upon which the act goes into

Not So Unantmous After All.

Navy Department officials say that the published report to the effect that the recent court of inquiry at Newport, R. I., acquitted Assistant Paymaster Rand of the charges preferred against him is incorrect. As a matter of fact the court found the charges against Paymaster Rand proven, but acquitted him of criminality in dealing with the firm of Swinburn, Peckham & Co., of Newport.

Judge-Advocate General Remey of the Navy is the party who furnished the alieged finding of the court to the reporters, and thus led them astray. The printed report of the court of inquiry shows that nearly every count was proven against Rand, while Judge Remey said it was a unanimous acquittal.

The initial ball of the O. C. Club, of duty creditably. Conspicuous among the many present was Colonel Edward Barry.

Dancing was indulged in until the "wee

Sunflowers For Brewster.

Pedestrians passing down Pennsylvania, avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, yesterday afternoon were attracted by a small squad of men in the park adjoining the Department of Justice, who were working like Turks with shovels, spades and other aericultural implements. working like I thus with shovers, spanes and other agricultural implements.

"What are they doing, ma?" innocently inquired a child who had been observing the movements of "the gang."

"Oh," replied the mother, "those are gardeners and they are planting holly-hocks and sunflowers in Brewster Park."

Mr. Dorsey, after the intermission, continuing, denied that he ever had any agreement with General Brady in regard to the imposition or remission of fines. There was no arrangement in regard to the remission of fines, and the witness doubted if any were remitted while he had anything to do with the malls. He never paid General Brady a cent as its portion for any remissions if any were made. The witness was then turned over to the Government for which was conducted by Mr. Merrick.

The dray inquires were as to the time the witness was elected to the Senate, when he took his sent, at what time his term expired, when he dray met Mr. Peck, where, the place of Mr. Feck's nativity, when the witness dray went to Arkansas and where from, and many other preliminary questions.
The letter that he received from Peck or J.
W. Dorsey and gave to Boone, he received in the fall, he thought, of 1877, or December of that year. It was after that, in 1878, he saw Peck at the witness' ranche in New Mexico.
He did not have any recollection of seeing Peck in Washington after that time. The witness did not think he was in this city between July 12, 1878, and the middle of November.
From this point the witness went on and gave an account of his movements and whereabouts down to August, 1890, when, in response to a question, the witness said He Was Preparing to Occupy Indiana.
Mr. Mexcicle asked if the witness published a

"I cannot tell," said Mr. Dorsey. "If you will read a line or two I will tell you."
Mr. Morrick then read a line or two,
"I wrote that, or rather dictated It," said

Mr. Dorsey,

"Can't you read, Mr. Dorsey," inquired Mr.

Morrick.

"Why, I have not been able to read a line for six months," answered Mr. Dorsey, "More than that, three months of that time I was contined in a dark room. I cannot read even the large headlines."

Can't you see to play a game of billiards?"
asked Mr. Morrick.

"Containly not," replied Mr. Dorsey,
The witness, resuming, said that he knew
Mr. Peck at one time owned a aswmill. In regard to that portion of the printed statement as to Peck's contract Mr. Dorsey said that Peck told him that he was an old contractor with the Department, and he accepted the statement as true. He knew that Peck came here to bid with a man named Chidester and had contracts; but not in his own name. The witness knew certainly of two contracts that Peck had with the Government before 1877. The witness had authority from Peck at times to transact his business,

A paper was submitted to the witness and read to him by Colonel Ingersoll. The witness said that he did not know whether Peck signed the paper or not. The witness had not recollection of signing the paper and did not think he signed it.

Mr. Merrick proposed to read the paper in evidence. It was objected to and the objection anistained.

evidence. It was objected to and the objection sustained. Mr. Merrick offered in evidence a temporary contsact between Peck and the Government of February 9, 1878, on the route from Camp Supply to Fort Bascomb for temporary service, purporting to be signed by Peck.

The wines had no recollection of signing the name of Peck to either the proposal or contract.

The witness had no recollection of signing the name of feck to either the proposal or contract.

His judgment was if he had signed it he would have rembered it. He thought that Boone was mistaken when he testified that the witness signed these papers. He drew some of the money arising from the service for Feck, but nover signed his name, and Feck got every penny of it. He did not know that John W. Dorsey had anylting to do with the route, and had no recollection of paying him any money coming from the route.

A letter purporting to be signed by John W. Dorsey and written to a subcontractor named Reynolds was read to Mr. Dorsey by Colonel ingersoli, and the witness said that he had no recollection of the paper at all, or signing John W. Dorsey's name to it, but if he could find the check, he might be able to tell something about it. Mr. Merricy asked permission to submit the paper to the jury that they might make camparlson of the handwriting.

This question was under argument when this report closed.

The Hueck-Down at Willard's.

Lat night was a very dull night for news and the way the boys selzed on the knock-down at Williard's billiard-room, published only in The Cartro yesterday, and worked it for all it was worth and a good deal more, victimizing the "metropolitan" papers, is laughable. If they had had any real news they wouldn't have touched such "rot." A good many first-class correspondents made no mention of it, for the simple reason that it wasn't worth telegraphing off. Texas sinings.

It became the solemn duty of Judge Wylie, of the Austin District Court, to pass sentence on an aged man named George Bliss for steating a hog.

"It is a shame that a man of your age should be giving up his mind to hog stealing. Do you know any reason why sentence should not be pronounced on you according to law?"

Commissioner West was seen at his desk n his new office to-day and interrogated Commissioner West was seen at his desk in his new office to-day and interrogated as to the new developments in the complications described yesterday. Mr. West said that he had nothing further to say as the matter seemed to have been pretty fully put before the public. He regretted any delay in paying the employes, but did not consider himself responsible as if he had accomplished his expectations a new president would have been selected on Saturday. He would, of course, attend the meetings of the board this afternoon and hoped that all the difficulties, if any existed, would be straightened out. He would participate in any action of the board simply as a member.

Judge Edmonds was seen for a moment this afternoon and said that he regretted that so much had already been said on the subject of the differences between the Commissioners. He had noticed in the Republicae a column of comment on the subject which contained about two grains of truth to a bushel of inaccuracy and falsehood. He wondered that a paper would publish such a garbled and untruthful statement when the truth was easily obtainable. The whole substance of the existing complications was whether one Commissioner should fly off in a tangent and rebel so publicly and indecerously against the decision of the other two.

Mr. Edmonds expected that the regular decorously against the decision of the other two.

Mr. Edmonds expected that the regular meeting would be held to-day, but did not know to what extent these matters would be considered. Judge Edmonds occupies a dignified and conservative position, from which he is not inclined to recede in the slightest. He declines to comment upon the course of his colleague, and prefers to have as little to say as possible about the unpleasantness in which he has taken so prudent, dignified and unquestionable a course.
